Manitou County

SOUTH MANITOU.

Herald Correspondence.

We have had the long wished for rain.

Crops are looking well and farmers are rejoicing.

C. Ankerson lost a very fine cow last Thursday morning. It is thought she ate some poisionous herb. Mr. Ankerson has a young calf which is a curosity. It is white as snow, and blind, having been born without any eyes. An operation was performed upon the place where the eye should be, but none was found.

We had an abundance of music last week. The fog signal howled and bellowed, and annoyed the citizens for nearly fifty hours in succession. It's terrible! It blows every minute and the thing became wild the other night, and went "on a lark" of its own. It began blowing and would not cease for the usual interval but kept on sounding until it had exhausted all its steam, and upon examination it was found to have swallowed a nail which lodged in the larynx of the windpipe and caused it to choke, and it choked to neath, It is all right now.

Grand Traverse Herald
June 4, 1885

Manitou County
South Manitou

Herald Correspondence

We have had the long wished for rain. Crops are looking well and farmers are rejoicing. C. Ankerson lost a very fine cow last Thursday morning. It is thought she ate some poisonous herb. Mr. Ankerson has a calf which is a curiosity. It is white as snow, and blind, having been born without any eyes. An operation was performed on the place where the eye should be, but none was found.

We had an abundance of music last week. The fog signal howled and bellowed, and annoyed the citizens for nearly fifty hours in succession. It's terrible! It blows every minute and the thing became wild the other night, and went "on a lark" of its own. It began blowing and would not cease for the usual interval but kept on sounding until had exhausted all of it's steam, and upon examination was found to have swallowed a nail which lodged in the larynx of it's windpipe and caused it to choke to death. It is all right now.

(transcript)